

City's Outstanding Citizen 2012, "Ambassador" John Henry Jones

by Virginia Beauchamp

"Greenbelt's unofficial ambassador to just about everyone." This is how Bob Zugby, chair of the committee to choose this year's Outstanding Citizen, characterized the man the group had chosen to honor with that title.

But earlier Zugby had kept us guessing, dodging even revealing this person's gender. Finally, of course, the name had to be revealed in what became a great, thundering climax as we learned that the enthusiastic singer of Happy Birthday, the Golden Age Club member, the GHI resident, was — in fact — John Henry Jones, Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen for 2012.

Before that revelation, Zugby had also let slip that the person in question was a great gardener, that he helps to set up the booths for Labor Day weekends, that at age 84 he still goes door to door every week delivering the News Review in Lakeside North apartments. He's been a soccer coach, was a PTA activist and often served as chaperone for Boy Scout and Girl Scout events.

At GHI, Zugby said, this person has been a "court liaison, greeter and conflict resolver."

Zugby then got more specific, more personal. This honoree, he said, "was not actually known for silence." The audience chuckled. Zugby continued, "If you are active in any way in this community, it may well have been because of his enthusiasm and inspiration."

When at last the name of the person in question was revealed, a great roar broke out from the crowd. And they watched as John Henry Jones walked toward the stage, talking to everyone along the way. Finally, with a little urging from Zugby, John Henry mounted the steps, soon followed by all his family — wife, daughter and her partner, sons and their wives, grandchildren and some close friends — as they gathered around him on the stage.

Along with the cheers, John Henry — as he's widely known — received the traditional package of gift certificates donated by Greenbelt area businesses. They were presented in a tote bag/back pack donated by the Greenbelt 75th Anniversary Committee. Bob Zugby expressed gratitude to the event's principal sponsor, the Greenbelt Rotary Club in the person of Harold Weiner, president.

After the onstage announcement, a reception was held in the council chambers of the Municipal Building to honor John Henry. Former Outstanding Citizens and city officials joined him, his family and friends and celebrated with cake and refreshments.

Green Candidate Auerbach Is Running for Congress

Longtime Greenbelt resident Bob S. Auerbach, age 92, a retired librarian and life-long peace activist, has been nominated as the 2012 Green Party candidate for Congress from Maryland's Fifth District and will appear on the general election ballot.

Bob Auerbach

Auerbach aims to promote the key values of the Green Party, which include nonviolence, environmental wisdom, social justice and grassroots democracy. Green Party candidates seek to avoid conflicts of interest they see in the dominant parties' campaign finance system driven by money from wealthy corporate interests they fear undermine democracy and compromise elected officials' ability to serve.

After litigation and petitioning, Maryland election officials announced last week the Maryland Green Party has again been certified as a ballot-qualified political party for the 2012 election. Certification of ballot status ensures that Bob Auerbach will be on the Tuesday, November 6 general election ballot.

History

Auerbach became active in politics (especially election reform) in the 1930s and has been active in the Congress on Racial Equality (CORE) in the 1940s and 1950s; the Fellowship of Reconciliation 1940-1950; and the War Resisters League. He served as Maryland Green Party co-chair from 1997 to 2000.

Auerbach won the Green Party nomination for Maryland District 5 U.S. House of Representatives in 2002 and again in 2004. He won the Green Party nomination for Comptroller of Maryland in 2006 although the Board of Elections removed his name from the statewide ballot in 2006 for what are described as technical reasons.

Public Hearing Scheduled For Preliminary SMA Plan

by Thomas X. White

While we enjoyed summer and the Labor Day Festival, the Maryland-National Capital Park & Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) quietly released the Preliminary Greenbelt Metro Area and MD 193 Corridor Sector Plan and Proposed Sectional Map Amendment (Preliminary Plan) for public review. The 426 page document is available online at www.pgplanning.org/greenbelt.htm and a limited number of copies are available at the Greenbelt Community Center info desk and the Springhill Lake Recreation Center. The Greenbelt Library has a copy available for reading at the library but no copies for distribution.

Citizens, organizations and local governments have until October 17 to submit comments for the record on the Preliminary Plan. A joint public hearing on the plan by Prince George's County Planning Board and Prince George's County Council sitting as the District Council for zoning is scheduled at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, October 2 in the first floor Committee Hearing Room of the County Administrative Building, 14741 Governor Oden Bowie Drive, Upper Marlboro. To testify or present comments, individuals or organizations should register with the M-NCPPC Public Affairs Office at 301-952-4584.

The nearly two-year effort to update a portion of the Greenbelt Area Sector Plan involved a series of community workshops that ended in May this year. The distribution of the Preliminary Plan was expected in early July but copies were not available until late July. The Greenbelt Planning and Community Development Department will brief council on the plan and make recommendations for official city comments for the record at its September 24 meeting. A follow-up worksession is tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, September 26.

City staff indicate councilmembers will testify at the October 2 hearing, with formal City of Greenbelt comments to be submitted before October 17.

The Preliminary Plan will update the 2001 Approved Sector Plan and Sectional Map Amendment for the Greenbelt Metro Area and amends portions of

Founder, Teacher of Alight Group Stresses Optimism

by Yagana Shah

Just after 5:30 p.m. on a Thursday, most employees have left their offices for the day. The halls of the Greenbelt Community Center are silent except for the faint sound of Angella Foster, still in the office taking calls. Foster is a dance instructor by day, teaching children ages 3 to 12. But after hours she is the choreographer and artistic director of Alight Dance Theater.

It was her husband's job as an analyst in Washington and the master's program in dance choreography at the University of Maryland that brought her to Maryland. During her time at the university, Foster connected with several other dancers and the idea for Alight was born.

Sitting cross-legged on a bench in the brightly lit dance studio at the Community Center, Foster, 34, leans forward and begins talking both with her voice and her hands about dance.

"Since I was four years old, I've pretty much always loved dance, words and fabric," Foster said, looking up with a smile. "It's very satisfying to make something."

Angella Foster

She makes many of the costumes for Alight's performances.

"Dance is so fleeting," Foster said. "It's nice to know once a piece is over, the costumes that I made and the dancers wore, seeing those and touching those gives me more a sense of what was. It's the memory of the motion."

Community Conversation

Greenbelt, with its active arts scene, was a natural location from which to launch Alight. Foster wanted to create "art in conversation" with the community and to make pieces that resonated with residents.

Alight's most recent piece, "Hometown Heroes: 75 Years of Extraordinary Greenbelt Women," was performed in the Greenbelt Museum house. The dancers, dressed in 1930s fashions and hairstyles, posed as housewives

Letters to the Editor

THANK YOU!

To each and all of you who took the time and made the effort to nominate me for the Outstanding Citizen for 2012, thank you. It is especially meaningful to me that I am honored on Greenbelt's 75th birthday.

I sincerely appreciate the hard work of Bob Zugby and his Outstanding Citizen Committee, as well as the scores of people involved in making the presentation and reception extra special. Our family was delighted!

In every aspect of our lives, let us be free to express our opinion, discuss our differences and work on solutions to our problems together. Respond to calls for volunteers by getting more involved in this community to make diversity more than just an empty word. Sow seeds of goodwill; nurture everyday kindnesses; uproot toxic weeds. Greenbelt will surely grow even greater.

To see happy faces and feel the exuberant support from people lining both sides of the parade route was overwhelming and humbling. (Thanks to the excellent driving of Dea Zugby, I did not tumble from my perch on the back of her convertible as I twisted and turned to wave to everyone.) Along with the love and pride of my wonderful family; being Grand Marshall was the highlight of memories that will stay deep in my heart until the end of my days.

John Henry Jones

THANKS!

Kudos to Linda Ivy, chairwoman of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival, and her staff for an outstanding 2012 Festival.

Everything was great: the bands, entertainment, food and today the sun was shining on Greenbelt. My family and I have never missed a Festival since moving to Greenbelt in 1977; we consume food at the Festival and spend many hours there . . . it's a giant block party and homecoming all rolled into one fun-filled four-day weekend.

Thank you!

Dea Nedeff Zugby

Compassionate

I am impressed with how seriously and compassionately Lauren of our Animal Control Department responded to my call about an injured bird in the Beltway Plaza parking lot on August 24. Also impressive was our

A little bird was injured and hopping between and under cars, unable to fly. It was only a matter of time before it would be run over by a car. I was unable to reach an animal warden but each number referred the caller to our police non-emergency number. Reluctantly, I called. The dispatcher treated this report of an injured bird seriously and contacted Animal Control.

Lauren responded within 10 minutes, reached the bird and determined the injuries were so severe that euthanasia would have to be performed. Sad for the little bird but kinder than meeting up with a car.

Bench Dedication For Joe Natoli, Sr.

On Saturday, September 15 at 1 p.m. the Joe Natoli, Sr., bench dedication ceremony will take place at the Center across from Generous Joe's establishment.

We take this opportunity to honor Joe with a personalized bench. Joe was a pillar of the community and a dear friend to many residents. We know that his family is extremely proud of his accomplishments, his love for his country, his city and his patrons. Joe was always a happy face to see when one entered his business. Joe treated everyone with respect and made you feel like you were part of his family. Joe's bench faces his establishment so he can sit and continue to watch over it and us.

When you pass by, glance over at the bench and I bet you will see Joe sitting there with a wave and a smile!

We also want to thank the City of Greenbelt for the opportunity to honor "our man Joe." He will truly be missed by each and every one of us.

Nationwide and in Greenbelt

As part of a nationwide release, "The Words" opens at Old Greenbelt Theatre on Friday, September 7 after a showing at the Sundance Film Festival. A newly-published novel by young author Rory Jansen (Bradley Cooper) draws hosannas – but what was the genesis of the work? Apparently written, no less, on a typewriter. Jansen and his inter-racial lady (Zoe Saldana) are torn by inner tensions; key roles are played by Jeremy Irons and Dennis Quaid.

Corrections

In the August 30 page 12 article on the Greenbelt Senior Softball team's victories, the topmost photo in the story is playing manager George Harrison, not Jasper Pendergrass, who is correctly identified in both the bottom photo and the inset. We'll plead beard length on this one.

In the August 30 announcement of Leonie Penney's Saturday, September 8 talk at Riderwood on the Holocaust, we gave the time incorrectly. The talk, which will be long over by the wrong time provided, is actually at 3:30 p.m. The News Review regrets the error.

In the August 30 issue last week on page 9, the ad for the Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) walk this coming Sunday, September 9 at Greenbelt Lake Park provided the wrong day of the week, although the September 9 numerical date was correct. Please see the corrected ad on page 9 and turn out Sunday for this 9th annual fundraising walk here.

Clara Jane Fendlay

Clara Fendlay, 80, died on Saturday, September 1, 2012, from complications following a brief illness. To those who knew and loved her, she was known simply as Jane or Nana.

Jane was born on September 20, 1931, and raised in Baltimore, Md. It was there that she was swept off her feet by the love of her life, Lee Fendlay. They were married on September 24, 1949. In the early 50s, the couple moved to Greenbelt to be closer to Lee’s work. They raised six children in their two-bedroom GHI on Southway and resided there until Lee’s death in 2011. There were many happy times spent in 9 court with their friends the Rimars, the Delaneys, the Halls and her close friend Jackie.

Jane and Lee were happily married for over 61 years.

During her working years, Mrs. Fendlay was employed by the Government Printing Office and later by the U.S. Postal Service from which she eventually retired.

Mrs. Fendlay enjoyed the simple things in life like spending time with her grandchildren and she wore many shirts decorated with their names until the numbers grew so large that they wouldn’t all fit. She was extremely proud of her 19 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren. She had also been an active member of the Greenbelt Legion Post #136 and loved spending time there reminiscing with old friends and making new ones.

Mrs. Fendlay also loved to play Bingo and everyone knew that luck seemed to follow her wherever she went. Her gentle spirit and unparalleled generosity were infectious and she was always willing to lend a hand to her fellow Greenbelters.

She is survived by her children Lee, Dave (Laura), Ronnie, Patty (Marty), Harry (Beth) and Kevin (Frann).

A viewing will be held on Sunday, September 9 from 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. at Borgwardt Funeral home in Beltsville. The funeral service will be Monday, September 10 at 10 a.m. at Cheltenham Veteran’s Cemetery, 1130 Crain Highway with a reception immediately following at the Greenbelt American Legion.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Alzheimer’s Association.

Trip to New England Delights Our Greenbelt Tour Group

by Kathleen McFarland

Well, they did it again. Surely, I thought, this trip to Boston couldn't live up to the good vibes and memories of the four other trips Barry and Mary Moien have led. But it did.

This time quite a few new faces were on the bus, those who had missed other trips with us – to the Smoky Mountains, Savannah, Niagara Falls and to the Biltmore in North Carolina. The new folks blended right in. All of us saw a lot, learned a lot, certainly ate a lot and had a great time.

We started off early on Thursday, May 17, with 42 travelers on the bus.

By the time we arrived at our dinner destination, a buffet restaurant in Connecticut, we'd made stops for restrooms and lunch, heard new jokes and started to get acquainted with the new passengers. Luckily our hotel in Marlboro, Mass., was large and comfortable. We got to bed early, preparing for three activity-packed days in the Boston area.

Day 1: JFK Library

Next morning our first stop was the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum, completed in 1979. The building, designed by famous architect I.M. Pei, overlooks Dorchester Bay, with the Boston skyline in the distance. It houses a gift shop and a small café on the first floor, museum exhibits on a lower level and official papers on an upper floor.

We started out by seeing a movie, depicting first the early years of the star-crossed Kennedy family, all laughing and smiling, swimming and sailing, but then struck by tragedies during World War II and ending with the very thin JFK campaigning for senator and then later, his election as President.

We then visited the many exhibits, some depicting American life and surroundings in the 1950s and '60s, with radios, black-and-white TV, manual typewriters, a pop-up toaster, an ironing board. In the hallways between exhibit rooms were photographs of Kennedy and his wife Jackie with famous personages like Leonard Bernstein and Nehru.

Some members staggered from the room dealing with the Cuban Missile crisis in 1962, realizing for the first time how close we had come to war with Russia.

I went, instead, to an adjoining exhibit in a room set up with chairs like a theater, where a movie, in color, was shown of Kennedy delivering his complete inauguration speech on the bitter-cold morning of January 20, 1961.

At the waterfront, JFK Library. Pictured are Steve Lindner, Marat Moore, Frank Pearlman, Carol Griffith and Sandy Mooney.

Statue, "The Fisherman," Gloucester, Mass.

Those of us living in Greenbelt at that time remember the major blizzard the day before.

Hearing the stirring phrases in Kennedy's own voice and seeing his gestures, brought back memories of how revitalized the country was by this new young president, so articulate, so inspiring. I sat transfixed, watching the people at his side: Jackie, LBJ, even the poet Robert Frost, an old man then.

When the speech ended with the oft-quoted words, "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country," I, like others watching, jumped up applauding.

After a bite of lunch and a quick trip to the gift shop, we were then on our way to our afternoon adventure.

Lexington and Concord

Our fascinating tour guide, Masha, dressed in colonial costume, met us at the visitors center in Lexington, her home town, telling us of the meetings in Lexington on the "18th of April, in '75" in the words of Longfellow's poem, in which the Sons of Liberty planned the warning ride by Paul Revere and others that set in motion the Revolutionary War.

The first skirmish was actually held in Lexington, which has its own memorials and its own Minute Man statue in the town park, though less famous than the one in Concord.

We re-boarded the bus and drove through Concord. Who knew that all those famous authors – Nathaniel Hawthorne, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry David Thoreau and Louisa May Alcott – all lived near each other in Concord – and all at the same time!

We arrived at Minute Man National Park in Concord, where Masha led us to log benches under shade, near a serene river and with a picturesque wooden bridge nearby. There she told us about the first official battle.

"If you don't remember anything else about this tour," she said, "remember this date: April 19, 1775." (Paul Revere's ride had taken place the previous evening.)

She showed us the spot on this side of the stream where the first British soldier had died and the two monuments there. I was touched by the sympathy she expressed for the young British soldiers who'd been sent so far away to America, not expecting to fight or to die.

Old North Bridge

We walked then onto the Old North Bridge and stood on the very spot where colonists and British soldiers had battled, with casualties on both sides.

On the other side of the bridge is the famous Minute Man statue sculpted by Daniel Chester French, completed in 1836. On the pedestal is inscribed the first stanza of Ralph Waldo Emerson's poem "Concord Hymn."

By the rude bridge that arched the flood,

Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,

Here once the embattled farmers stood

And fired the shot heard round the world.

Our dinner that evening was at a buffet restaurant, the Bickford Grill. Appropriately, most of us sampled the "Yankee pot roast" and table by table, began to sing its praises. The restaurant owner told us it was a secret recipe, the specialty of the house.

Day 2: Salem

The next day we met our new tour guide, Allen, and started off for Salem. I wanted to hear about the witches. But right away Allen knocked the wind out of my sails, so to speak. He said the famous witch trials didn't occur until 1692, whereas the city of Salem had been founded in 1626, already an important shipping port and trade center.

Indeed, the visitors' center and gift shop was stock full of nautical books and merchandise, with nary a witch's broom to be found. We learned that Salem, because of its maritime history, had been the first place designated by the Park Service as a National Historical Site.

Allen made a bow to the witch theme, however, by taking us first to the cemetery where the 19 innocent people who were hanged as witches had been buried. A small park adjoining the cemetery holds stone benches bearing each name.

He pointed out that some of the most respected families in New England history, like Emerson and Nathaniel Hawthorne, had ancestors by blood or marriage who had been judges in the witch trials.

After a bus tour around Salem, in which Allen pointed out the Peabody Essex Museum, full of treasures collected by sea captains from China and all over the world, the Witch Museum and other sites, he pointed the way to the waterfront and the House of Seven Gables made famous by Hawthorne's novel.

We were on our own then for lunch and shopping or sight-seeing. My own little group ended up watching Morris dancers perform near the Old Custom House (the first in the country) and had lobster rolls for lunch outside under umbrellas at a restaurant near the water.

"Gold Coast," Gloucester

Then Allen directed the bus to a "road less traveled" along the seashore, called the "Gold Coast." This contained fabulous houses and beaches where wealthy sea captains built homes and where lovely resorts such as Manchester-by-the-Sea, have sprung up.

We learned the correct pronunciations of Gloucester (Gloss-ter) and of Quincy (with a "z"). Near Gloucester we stopped along the beach to see the famous statue memorializing The Fisherman and a newer one of his wife and children, waiting for his return from sea.

Crossing a picturesque drawbridge, we arrived at our dinner destination, the Gloucester House restaurant, where, before dinner, the handsome owner presented a talk about the history of the entire Cape Ann area and its value to the fishing industry and other businesses. One small fact I remember: the first American Legion post had been established in Gloucester!

We had an excellent dinner there (most of us ordering had-dock) and arrived at our hotel in time to play a few games of Bingo at tables in the lobby, a much-anticipated activity on our trips.

Day 3: City of Boston

Our guide for Boston, Jim, directed the bus through neighborhood after neighborhood, across the bridge over the Charles River to Cambridge, past MIT and Harvard, pointing out the sights. Later at Faneuil Hall, a stop on the Liberty Walk that was marked by red lines along the streets and sidewalks, we heard a talk by a young park ranger on the history of this famous meeting place that had been built in 1742.

For lunch we picked up sandwiches at the market place and sat outside to eat and people-watch in the broad walkway. Vendors and entertainers were everywhere. The weather was warm and sunny, as on every day of our trip.

After lunch we went to Revere Park, in a former Italian neighborhood dominated by a large statue of Paul Revere on horseback.

Next was the Old North Church, where the "two lanterns aloft" of Longfellow's poem had been hung. There a young Park Service guide spoke to us from the pulpit, pointing out the place high above the choir loft where men would have climbed a ladder to place the lanterns.

The church itself is beautifully restored. Still there are some of the original high-walled, wooden box-like pews which whole families had claimed, heating themselves with warm bricks and bringing food and blankets for the long hours of worship.

The church still serves as an active Episcopal church. I picked up their bulletin for May 20, 2012, which announced Sunday services at 9 and at 11 a.m. and a Summer Picnic on June 24.

Pier 1

The next stop was Pier 1 of the Charleston Navy Yard, where the USS Constitution, "Old Ironsides," is berthed. The world's oldest commissioned naval vessel still afloat, it played an important part in the War of 1812, which is being commemorated this year.

Next we visited Fenway Park, now celebrating its 100th anniversary. The Red Sox were not “at home” that day, so we could not tour the stadium; but we walked around outside the fence instead, admiring the sculptures of Boston hero Ted Williams and his teammates Bobby Doerr, Johnny Peske and Dom DiMaggio.

A dinner at Frank’s Steak House in Cambridge topped off the evening.

Coming Home: Harold’s

Coming home the next day, we ran into our only rainy weather of the trip. We settled in for the long ride but another adventure was still ahead! As the bus neared New Jersey, Barry told us about a deli he knew about which served gigantic sandwiches and pies. Near Exit 10 of the New Jersey Turnpike, it was not far off our planned course. He asked if we were willing to have a late lunch there, skipping dinner then so we could arrive home at our appointed time. Of course we said “yes.”

In spite of Barry’s build-up (maybe he thought he was exaggerating a bit), we were truly unprepared for the size and opulence of the dishes prepared at Harold’s Deli. The sun came out just as we approached the large, modern restaurant (not the dingy hole-in-the-wall I was picturing). There the efficient staff was adept at handling large groups like ours.

Some of our group ordered the corned-beef sandwiches on rye.

Kathleen Knox and Mary Moien try out a pew at the Old North Church.

One sandwich, six inches high, piled with meat, would serve four people. Extra slices of bread to make more sandwiches could also be picked up at the free pickle bar, in addition to coleslaw and condiments of every kind.

The desserts were massive. One person ordered a chocolate mousse cake which yielded enough pieces to satisfy two tables of people.

Harold’s proved such a success that Barry said he will take his next busload of tourists for dinner there after their trip to New York to see the Rockettes in November.

When we turned into the Greenbelt Library parking lot before dark on May 21, we were tired but happy, bidding good-bye then to old friends and new. Another wonderful trip!

the 1989 Approved Master Plan for Langley Park-College Park-Greenbelt and Vicinity and the 1990 Adopted Sectional Map Amendment for Planning Areas 65, 66 and 67 (the Preliminary Plan impacts a portion of Planning area 67).

The Preliminary Plan also builds on the 2002 Approved General Plan for Prince George’s County for centers and corridors in what is known as the Developed Tier, addresses sustainable development tied to existing and proposed mass transit options and incorporates recommendations from functional area master plans such as for Green Infrastructure, Transportation and Water Resources. Of importance to Greenbelt, the Preliminary Plan proposes specific zoning classification changes in the Sector Plan area that would implement land use recommendations for selected parcels within the Sector Plan area.

After the October 17 close of the comment period a digest of submitted testimony on the Preliminary Plan will be sent to the Planning Board for consideration by the end of 2012, with the Planning Board taking up to three months to review and modify it. Following review the plan would be considered again by the District Council for either approval or disapproval or to set another hearing.

Arriving Here

In 1970 John Henry Jones, in his 40s, met a young lady, Elaine Dietz, from Greenbelt at a Halloween Party in Washington, D.C. Both worked at St. Elizabeth’s Hospital. By the next year, they were married and living in Greenbelt’s Lakeside North. Two boys and a girl were born; as they grew up, community-minded John Henry was recruited to coach soccer teams for the Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club. The sport was new to him so he read up on it in the public library while pursuing other activities – such as gardening, including growing colored cotton, as slaves had to do back in the day for their own crops. His favorite crop in recent years has been hot peppers, both Scotch Bonnet and Habanero varieties.

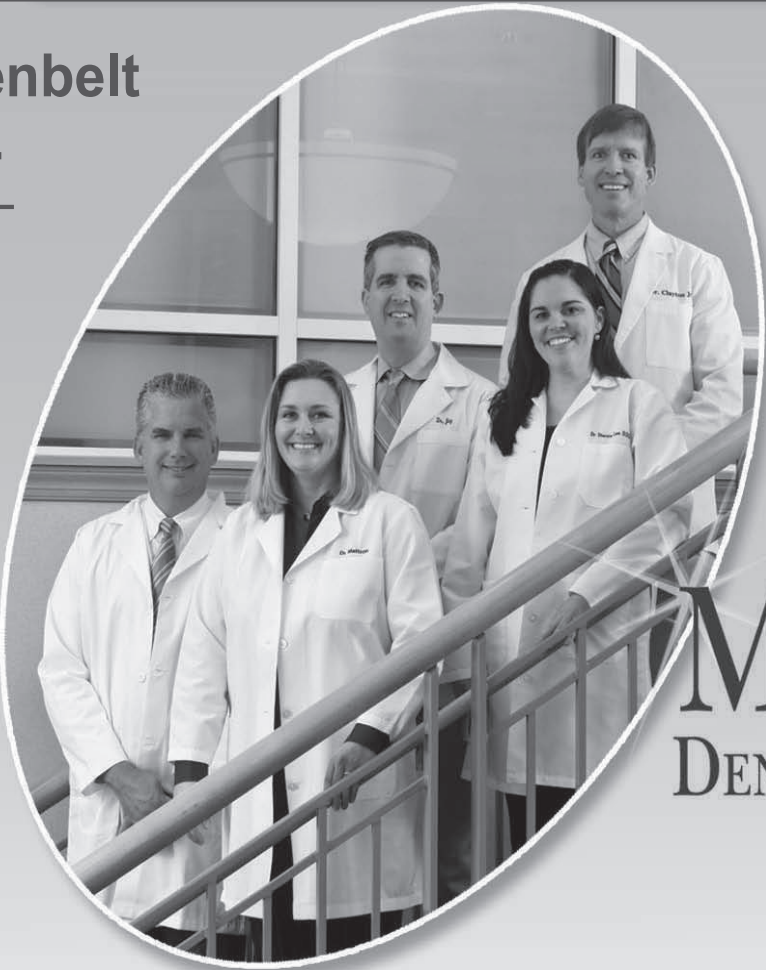

Did his naming as Outstanding Citizen 2012 come as a surprise? Yes and no, he told the News Review. He knew he was a candidate last year and this year, before he set out for the ceremony, his wife told him to put on long pants and a nice shirt. Hmm, he thought, and when he approached the stage and saw his son who had come up from Ft. Bragg in North Carolina

It was a late night. At the reception afterward, John Henry was told more people were attending than ever before. He marked his first day by sleeping in a little later than usual.

from the era, leading visitors through each room of the historic house and dancing through the motions of daily home life.

“All of our work has story at its core,” Foster said. “People need story. It’s actually essential, so that’s something I can offer my community.”

Unlike many contemporary pieces, Foster said Alight’s work isn’t meant to be edgy or sexy. “There’s a core of hope to all of our work . . . sort of a core of optimism.”

The community and viewers have responded well. Foster tells a story of a woman who came to a recent performance and told her that the performance made her want to stand up and join the dancers. “I told her that’s great,” Foster said.

Foster said she is constantly taking in her surroundings. The environment, workspaces, people and her family have all inspired her choreography.

Debut in 2010

Her proudest moment was the 2010 debut of her commissioned work, “Speechless,” at The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington.

Her cousin, Taylor Clark, 17, served as inspiration for the work, which tells the stories of children with special needs who cannot speak and their families. Clark was born with a developmental disability that prevents her from speaking.

It’s clear that Clark is dear to Foster. Clark’s birthday falls the day after Foster’s wedding date. “When we got married, Taylor thought our entire wedding was basically for her, so we sang happy birthday for her when we cut our cake,” Foster said.

Clark attended the performance of “Speechless” with her parents. She wore a little yellow dress, similar to the one worn by the little girl in the piece. Her mother asked, “Is that Taylor up there?” and Clark knowingly pointed to the girl in yellow.

“It was so gratifying,” Foster said, “to make something that really spoke to my family. It was an exercise in empathy and compassion for us to enter into the stories and try to communicate this almost incommunicable experience.”

Foster, a self-proclaimed perfectionist, spends a lot of her time preparing for Alight’s performances. Remaining patient when things pile up, she said, is a challenge.

“When you’re dealing with dance, your instrument and medium are people’s bodies. Their time, lives, emotional states, all have to be addressed before you can do work . . . I really care about each one of them,” Foster said.

The dancers lounge in the living room of the Greenbelt Museum house one Sunday morning, between takes of a video performance. Foster leads the conversation as the group whisper among themselves, discussing the shoot. Every so often they burst into a fit of laughter.

For One Another

“One of the most delightful parts of it is being with and for one another . . . we really do support each other,” Foster said.

As the group heads to the backyard of the museum for the shoot, Foster talks with the videographer, discussing the angle of the upcoming take. Her hands seem to do the talking for her as she gestures and enacts a scene.

“She’s extremely creative, and one of the things Angella pairs with that is the ability to see the end project and all of the steps to get there . . . she likes to do things well,” said Monica Warren, an Alight dancer. “It’s not a chore. It’s something she wants to work on.”

Foster says it all comes naturally to her and is something she was “hardwired” to do. At any given time, she says, she has at least 10 ideas for projects circling her mind.

“She knows what she wants; she’s certain about it and sticks to it,” said Valerie Branch, an Alight dancer.

It’s not just another Thursday for Foster. Today happens to be her ninth wedding anniversary. Her husband is at home preparing a celebratory dinner for them.

The couple met in elementary school, growing up in Jessamine County in northern Kentucky. They didn’t start dating until the summer after her graduation from Hope College, when she was headed to New York City for work and he was in Russia for a semester abroad. “We wrote letters and emails back and forth. It was very romantic. Very Indie rom-com,” Foster said.

Meet Frank DeBernardo, Vice President

By Robin Everly

Although Frank DeBernardo is one of our newly elected first-time Board members, he has been active in the Greenbelt community since moving to GHI in July 2004. Frank treasures GHI for its park-like ambience and walkability along with the spirited civic-mindedness of its residents.

Frank has tons of administrative and community experience that he is bringing to the Board. He is currently on the City of Greenbelt 75th Anniversary Committee. For the past four years, he has represented Prince George's County and our community on the Metro Riders' Advisory Council, which he chaired in 2010 and 2011. This council advises the WMATA (aka Metro) Board on rider and public transportation issues. Frank is also one of the founding members of GreenBELT Pride, a group for lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgendered (LGBT) individuals and their supporters.

Frank has been executive director of New Ways Ministry for 18 years, a job that he loves. New Ways is a national Catholic ministry of advocacy, reconciliation, and education for lesbian and gay Catholics and the wider church and civil communities. The organization's purpose is to build bridges between lesbian and gay people and the Catholic Church.

When asked why he ran for the Board and what he hopes to accomplish, Frank answered, "I ran because I think I might be able to help the GHI community in two areas - communications and volunteer recruitment. These are a big part of my job as executive director of a non-profit, and I hope that I can bring some of that experience to GHI." He feels GHI is facing a big issue with the upcoming upgrades to our units. When asked what he felt is the most pressing issue facing GHI, he answered, "that we have to find better ways to help people become involved in the work of the cooperative. Two areas in which I think we can improve are educating people on what it means to live in a cooperative and providing people with opportunities to become involved in areas that affect their lives and families."

So far, Frank is learning a LOT, enjoying his colleagues on the Board and he is impressed with the GHI staff. He respects the members who have come to meetings to voice their concerns and says: "The passion and interest I have seen has given me a new appreciation for living in GHI."

Welcome aboard, Frank!

Pepco Upgrade

Pepco will be undertaking a significant infrastructure upgrade in Old Greenbelt in the coming months. The project involves replacing 500 utility poles, 250 transformers and 58,000 feet of electrical transmission lines that have reached the end of their useful service life. Pepco will be conducting significant tree pruning and removal in conjunction with this project. GHI and city staff have been meeting with Pepco representatives for several months during the project's planning phase to minimize the impact of this project on GHI and city residents as well as the tree canopy throughout the city. If you have any questions or comments concerning this project, you may email them to pepcoproject@greenbeltmd.gov. Documents from the August 17 public presentation are now posted. For more information visit www.greenbeltmd.gov/PEPCO_project.
